2:00 P.M. – 2:45 P.M. | The Million Dollar Question: How to Advertise and Monetize

The digital video business has been described as the wild west, which is great for innovation but challenging to monetize. In addition, consumers now browse video like "window shoppers," hopping on and off sites and apps if their attention isn't held. With digital video being searched for and consumed as no other digital media before – as well as the variety of content and plethora of platforms - who has the secret to unlocking digital video's revenue potential? Is there a standard, or is it all about customization?

3:15 P.M. – 3:45 P.M. | The Powers Behind Digital Video:
The Viewing Experience

If, when you're creating a video ad or a piece of video content, you envision a nuclear family sitting in their den watching together, erase that image from your mind. These days, a consumer may start watching video on their mobile device when they're commuting home from work. Then they'll pick it up again after dinner using Chromecast or AppleTV, and finish watching it in bed on their iPad. That's why making it easy for consumers to seamlessly access and watch video across multiple platforms is no small feat. With ever-changing technology and tools, staying ahead of the game demands nimble teams, elegant resolutions and scalable products. Discover the best way to match these tools with your specific content and business objectives to maximize exposure and deliver a great consumer experience

3:45 P.M. – 4:15 P.M. | Closing Keynote
Steve Goldbloom, Host – Everything But the News

What would Jim Lehrer do? That's Steve Goldbloom's mantra in PBS Digital Studios' "Everything But the News" – the pseudo mockumentary series that covers culture and tech in California while giving a behind-the-scenes look at the making of a PBS NewsHour segment. The show, which launched this year, blurs the line between reality and fiction, mixing sketch actors alongside real CEOs from such companies as Uber, Grindr, IndieGogo and much more. The producer, host and mastermind behind this new digital series, Goldbloom explains his crazy journey to get the series made and what it says about digital video today.
