

(Silver Spring, Md.) – Veteran finance executive Jason Eustace has joined the CuriosityStream leadership team as Chief Financial Officer. The announcement was made today by President and CEO Clint Stinchcomb, to whom Eustace will report.

In his new role, Jason oversees all finance & accounting for CuriosityStream. He comes to the company with decades of experience and leadership in domestic and international media. Jason has an exemplary record of achievement in financial planning and analysis in the media, e-commerce and retail industries. He has a proven history of driving organizational effectiveness by discerning areas of financial and operational risk and implementing strategic changes to meet corporate objectives.

“Jason brings a unique breadth of financial experience and proven leadership that will help us continue to evolve and grow our services around the world,” said Stinchcomb. “His public company acumen and deep knowledge of digital and traditional media on a global scale is absolutely invaluable and we are thrilled to welcome him to the CuriosityStream leadership team.”

“I’ve had the privilege of working across a number of dynamic industries, however, I’m excited to return to the media space with a pioneer like CuriosityStream,” said Eustace. “You always hope to work for a company that enriches lives and brings real value to people and that certainly is the case with CuriosityStream.”

Prior to this role, Eustace served as the Head of Finance for Bluemercury, Pet360 and Discovery Communications-US Networks, where he was responsible for accounting, financial planning and analysis, budgeting, and strategic planning.

Silver Spring, MD -- CuriosityStream today announced tech industry veteran Devin Emery is its new Head of Growth for the global media company. The announcement was made by President and CEO, Clint Stinchcomb, to whom Emery reports.

Emery will oversee a 360° view of the business while focusing on marketing, audience intelligence, product, content in the aim of growing the service’s subscriber base, audience engagement and brand partnerships. Emery, named to the Forbes “30 under 30” in media list in 2019, will be based in Silver Spring, Maryland and New York, New York.

“Devin is an elite talent and a proven agent of growth with a keen eye for developing and optimizing processes that advance businesses like ours,” said Stinchcomb. “Devin has a clear passion for the business of storytelling and is eager to help our team build CuriosityStream into the world’s leading independent factual media company.”

“I’m excited to join Clint and the rest of the CuriosityStream team in exponentially increasing the impact of our brand and programming,” said Emery. “It’s a special opportunity to take part in developing and cultivating a strong brand that brings a unique and powerful choice to the industry and to our viewers.”

Emery most recently served as Vice President of Growth at Cheddar, where the network became a leading post-cable digital and linear publisher, reaching hundreds of millions of people monthly across platforms, resulting in a $200M acquisition by Altice USA.

Prior to Cheddar, Devin was on the launch team of the OTT video networks group at Endeavor where he led strategy & audience development, and has spent time at companies including Google, Bedrocket Media Ventures and Tribune Broadcasting.